BILLY SUNDAY PLEASES HUGE CROWD HERE

Saloon and Backers Harassed by Evangelist at Presbyterian Church

COAT IS REMOVED

Speaker Shows Old Time, Vim and Vigor

Inimitable Billy Sunday, coatless, perspiring, and inspiring his listeners with his old time vim, vigor and vitality as of his early days on the sawdust trail, assailed the saloon and all supporters of the saloon before a filled auditorium at the Presbyterian church Monday evening. Rev. E. S. Toensmeier of the Presbyterian church, Tuesday, estimated the throng which heard Rev. Mr. Sunday at between 900 and 1,000 persons. The entire church auditorium was filled, the galleries were crowded and vestibules were brimming over with interested persons. Many stood outside the church to hear this prominent speaker who made his first appearance in this city.

Still possessing a good speaking voice and carrying out his unique platform and pulpit activity, Mr. Sunday greatly pleased the crowd which heard him. He began to talk at about 8 o'clock and before he had progressed 15 minutes he had taken his coat off and tossed it to Rev. Toensmeier.

AIMS AT SALOON

Blow after blow was aimed at the saloon by the speaker who has devoted his entire life to this problem. He has helped in many campaigns to dry up cities, counties and states and the wets blame him for creating much of the sentiment that eventually crystallized the Eighteenth amendment.

A speech by Billy Sunday is almost impossible to describe. His natural use of similies and comparisons, his profusion of adjectives is probably not matched by any speaker on the public platform today.

Following are a number of excerpts from the address Mr. Sunday gave Monday evening.

"I defy any man to show me that the saloon has ever lessened the burden of taxation.

"The licensed liquor business is the cause of three-fourths of all the cost of our criminal system.

"Booze is the parent of crime and the mother of sin.

"The booze question is the one big question before the American people.

"If you want to consort with the blackleg and thief and the drunkard and prostitute, go to the saloon.

"You'll always find the saloon in alliance with corrupt politics.

"It fights every movement of good government and for the uplifting of men.

"It is the moral clearing house for rot, and damnation, and proverty and insanity, and it wrecks homes and blights lives.

"The saloon needs two million boys a year to take the place of the drunkards who die off or are sent to the penitentiary.

"The saloon cocks the highway man's pistol. It puts the rope in

MANY COMPLAIN OF STONE-THROWING

A number of compiaints have been made to police headquarters by southend residents to the effect that a crowd of boys residing in that end of town have been destroying property and causing disturbance the past two weeks.

Sunday evening the crowd hid in a yard on S. Court-st and threw rocks at passing autos, breaking the wind-shield in one Ford coupe. A bus driver for the Valley Public Service Co. also reported that the same crowd had hurled stones at the bus.

Minor thefts including fruits from three and others have been reported and are believed to be committed by the same 'gang.'

Factories Begin Canning of Beet

Circleville's total payroll is expected to receive another boost Wednesday with the opening of two local canning factories. Sears and Nichols Co., and the Winorr plant are expected to open their beet canning activities with nearly 300 employes in both factories. These employes for the five-day week will draw a payroll of approximately $3,500.

After this week the canning factories will probably enter another week of inactivity until the latter part of July when late beets will begin coming in.

The process of canning beets here is vastly different and much simpler than that necessary for the recently completed pea canning. The process might be arbitrarily divided into ten separate sections.

First, when the truck load of beets is unloaded by the farmer, they are graded into three divisions according to size. The farmer is paid on the basis of the amount of each grade.

Then a large washer cleanses them and the beets are ready for steaming under a temperature of 240 degrees. This loosens their skins so that the women peeling them have little difficulty with their work.

Inspection is next in order, following which they are re-graded for odd-sized beets. They are then placed in cans, so many of each sized beet going into each can Placed under an exhaust heat of 170 degrees the cans are ready to be sealed.

The cooking process, conducted also at a temperature of 240 degrees, completes the routine of beet canning.

Eight or ten loads of beets averaging a ton per load are generally handled at each factory here.

Prospects for the late beets are not very good this season because of bad germination caused by the recent heat wave. However, early beets are good both in quantity and quality.

FRENCH FLIGHT COMES TO END IN ARID WASTES

'Hyphen' Forced Down, One of Flyers, Unnamed, is Injured

PLANE IS WRECKED

Men Were Seeking to Shatter American Record

MOSCOW, July 14.—The ambitious attempt of the French aviators, Joseph Lebrix and Margel Doret, to make a 6000-mile nonstop flight from Paris to Tokyo came to grief last night on the wastes of eastern Siberia, according to a message received in Moscow today.

The plane cracked up near the desolate village of Sheberti, not far from Nizhmthininsk and approximately 3.600 miles from Paris. The aviators and their mechanic, Rene Mesmin, saved their lives by leaping with parachutes from the falling machine.

TWO ARE UNHURT

Two of the men were unhurt, but the third suffered a sprained leg. The dispatch failed to state which of the three was hurt.

The plane, named the Trait D'Union (Hyphen), was a complete wreck. Startled natives of the little Siberian town hurried to the scene and gave every aid to the flyers.

Lebrix and Doret left Paris early Sunday morning and arrived over Moscow that evening. Shortly after, they began to encounter rough weather and it was believed that a severe storm caused the crash at Sheberti.

AFTER RECORD

Had the flight to Tokyo been successful, the aviators intended to hop across the Pacific and back to Paris via New York in an effort to beat the round-the-world record of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty.

Basle—the bank of international settlements and central banks of England, France, Italy and the United States stood ready to extend financial aid to Germany "by all the means at their disposal" if collaboration of their government and private bankers was obtainable the bank of international settlements extended the $100,000,000 credit to the Reichsbank due Thursday.

Berlin—Germany was virtually under an economic dictatorship. All banks and credit institutions, except the Reichsbank, were closed until Thursday. All stock exchanges were closed for the week. The cabinet guaranteed liabilities of the closed Danat bank, declaring a vitual moratorium on its obligations.

OHIO CROPS IN NEED OF RAIN

Situation Reaches Acute Stage Farm Experts State; Fruit Excellent

COLUMBUS, O., July 14—Aggravated by lack of rain, the crop situation in Ohio is approaching an acute stage, local weather bureau and farm crop experts said today.

At present farm crops are rated as satisfactory and no serious results have been noted, but the need for general rains is becoming increasingly acute, it was stated.

Rain in the state for the last few months have been of a local nature and irregularly distributed throughout the state and consequently, while some sections have ample moisture other districts are in imminent danger of being adversely affected by drought.

Present indications, according to weather bureau officials here, offer little hope for early relief. General rains at present are being restricted to the New England and gulf states.

While some sections of the state have been virtually rainless for several weeks past, northwestern Ohio has been amply supplied and

Do Storms Foul Spring In Your Watch? Yes-No

Has the mainspring of your watch run afoul of a thunderstorm "et" Does a thunderstorm ruin the mainspring? Does it have any effect on it at all?

Watch experts of leading jewelers about town disagree about this point. All of the watch experts here who gave information ask that their names be with-held from any statements, however they disclosed some worth-while information

One expert supports the theory that the comparatively high charge of electricity in the air during a thunderstorm is one cause of a mainspring snapping. The supporter of this theory has noticed for many years that invariably after such a storm people start bringing in watches for mainspring repairs. He also thinks the change in temperature at the time might have some effect.

Another jeweler says that he gets his greater number of watch repairs during the three hot summer months of June and August. From that evidence he believes that the heat of the season affects the spring.

Various other men believe that change in temperature is solely responsible for the trouble A mainspring is of very highly tempered steel, and, therefore, they say, is extremely sensitive to climatic conditions

But these judgments are all empirical, and coming down to hard facts of the thing, all admit that mainsprings are undoubtedly broken because of the great pressure placed upon them from continual winding

Hard use alone causes anything to wear out or break - why should a spring be exempt from the results of the laws of force?

German Fascists, Communists Fight in Street is First Conflict

BANKS WILL ASSIST

Offer of International Bank Staves Off Ruin

BERLIN, July 14— With Germany battling against terrific odds to stave off bankruptcy and collapse, financial panic spread throughout central Europe today.

One large bank in Rumania closed their doors forcing government authorities to take drastic measures to prevent a general run on financial institutions and duplications of the flight of capital that has left Germany prey to fears of ruin and revolt.

On the heels of these financial failures in countries bordering on Germany came the first clash since the crisis between German fascists and communists. The two radical parties which are waiting only a favorable opportunity to turn Chancellor Heinrich Bruning's cabinet out of office and seize the reins of government.

The sharp report of police pistols broke the silence that has descened like a pall over Berlin with closing of all banks and stock exchanges and consequent virtual cessation of business. One communist was killed and several rioters injured before the antagonists were dispersed. Three were arrested.

Spread of Germanys money panic to Rumania, Hungry and Austria was not unexpected, as these countries, as well as many others of central Europe, are largely dependent for their existence upon trade with Germany

Fearing wholsale withdrawals such as left the Reich's financial structure weak and tottering, the Hungarian government ordered all banks closed for a period of three days. At Jassy in Rumania, the bank of Dacia, one of the country's largest financal institutions, went under, while the Mercur bank in Vienna, an affiliate of the Darmstraedter Und national bank, the huge German organization whose closing precipitated the present crisis, was forced to close its doors

The general opinion prevailing here was that the bank for International settlements, at its meeting in Basle, Switzerland, while extending a measure of temporary aid to the embattled Reich had actually thrown cold water on its hopes of obtaining long-term credit.

The feeling was growing that the bank's decision merely to extend for another three months its portion of the $100,000,000 credit accorded to Germany had served to isolate the Reich from the reserves of fresh gold she feels is needed to stave off ruin.

ALTERCATION IS TOLD BY COUNTY MAN

Harold Heeter, Native of Wayne-twp, Tells How Roese Met Death

DROVE OTHER AUTO

Story Differs From First Reports of Incident

A different story of the altercation which led to the death of Alex Roese, 32, of Columbus, father of five children, was told to Sheriff Chas. Radcliff at about midnight Monday by Harold Heeter, 27, of Columbus, a native of Wayne-twp, who admitted he was the driver of the second car which figured in the affair.

Contrary to previous reports that Heeter and a friend sought to fight following a minor accident at the south end of the High-st viaduct late Saturday, Heeter told Sheriff Radcliff that Roese and four other men in his automobile sought trouble.

HIS STORY RELATED

His story follows:

"We (another man and two girls) were driving south on High-st heading toward Circleville. Just after crossing the viaduct we stopped the car and had stopped only a minute when the car driven by Roese smashed into the rear of the Ford. I got out and so did Heeter and other men with him. My car was damaged about the rear and I told Roese he would have to pay for it. He laughed and refused. I threatened to call a police cruiser and gave my buddy 25 cents to go to a telephone. He said that we had better let it alone as not cause any trouble, when Roese said he would 'beat H—— out of me.

"I stepped into my automobile and drove south. Roese and men in his car follows us. We were frightened and drove fast. Roese managed to get his car in front of us and stopped, trying to force us to stop. We managed to get around him. We sped again and Roese passed us just before we got to the bridge below Bloomfield, (at the Dave Six farm) the other car was stopped and followed our path: I put the car in reverse and turned around before anyone could jump on the car and started back toward Columbus.

'We had gone quite a ways when the car again caught up with us. Roese was riding on the side of the car and grabbed for my automobile. He reached the side of it and said "I'll kill you, you ——".

"I snatched a curtain-rod that was lying in the bottom of the car and beat Roese' hands until he let go. He fell to the pavement and the car behind ran over him."

NATIVE OF COUNTY

Heeter, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Heeter of Wayne-twp, said that he thought he had better do something about the affair when he learned Columbus radio cruisers were searching for him. He called Sheriff Radcliff from Columbus late Monday and said he would be down Tuesday, but when he learned he could not get away from his work for the A & P Company, he saw the sheriff Monday night.

He said that anytime he is wanted for questioning he will appear.

Funeral services for the deceased man will be held at the South Bloomfield M. E. church Wednesday at 2 p. m. with burial in the Bloomfield cemetery. His widow, Mrs. Hazel Roese, three sons and two daughters, besides the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roese, four brothers and five sisters, survive.

Power will be given the state director of aeronautics to specify the manner in which airports, landing fields and hangars shall be built. He will have authority to appoint deputies, with the powers of peace officers, who will look after the enforcement of the provisions of the code.

The governor is authorized to appoint an aeronautical advisory commission, of not more than five members, to serve without pay.

A law, amending the state workmen's compensation act, by requiring that the amounts to be contributed to the state insurance fund by the taxing districts throughout the state for the protection to relative degrees of hazard, will become effective July 31.

Enactment of this law was due to the fact that the workmen's compensation fund is practically insolvent because flat-rate payments, without any regards for accident experience in the various political subdivisions, were required in the past.

All cases involving juveniles will be placed exclusively under the jurisdiction of the juvenile courts by virtue of a law becoming operative July 27. This law will dispose of the question whether boys accused of murder were within the jurisdiction of the common pleas or juvenile court.

Other new laws which will become effective during the last week in July include those regulating investments of life insurance companies; providing specifications for construction of dry cleaning and dyeing establishments; regulating the sale of oleomargerine; authorizing establishment of county-wide branch bank systems; extending the authority of tuberculin testers on a state-wide basis; regulating the width, height and length of vehicles operated on the highways; revising the arbitration laws; revising the statutes specifying the powers of the state real estate licensing board, changing the size of mesh in gill nets; prohibiting possession of fish nets, or fish traps, within one mile of the Ohio river and regulating the wages of persons employed on public improvements.

FLOCK OWNERS TO TOUR 12 COUNTIES

To see the practices used in obtaining a greater income from farm flocks in southwestern Ohio, hundreds of poultrymen and farmers are planning to attend the fourth annual poultry tour conducted by the poultry department at the state university in cooperation with county agricultural agents, July 28-31, according to R. E. Cray, extension specialist in poultry at the Ohio State university.

Making 19 stops in 12 southwestern counties, farmers joining the tour will see some of the most profitable poultry farms in the state and have an opportunity to discuss with specialists some of the methods that are paying substantial profits during the present depression. Farms will be visited having flocks ranging in size from 350 laying hens to record of performance flocks of over 5,000 birds.

Among the other stops of interest to farm flock owners and poultrymen are: the plant of a company where 18,000 birds are fattened at one time and where 50,000 pounds of feathers are dried and sold each year, the factory of one of the largest manufacturers of brooding and incubator equipment in the United States, and one of the largest exclusive White Leghorn breeding farms in the country.

The tour will go through the following counties: Franklin, Madison, Clark, Champaign, Miami, Shelby, Montgomery, Preble, Butler, Hamilton, Clermont, Highland, Brown, Ross, and Pickaway.

The tour may be joined on July 28 at 9 a. m., in front of the poultry building at the Ohio State university, Columbus, or at the Plant of the Buckeye Incubator Company, Springfield, at 10:30 a. m. On the second day, July 29, the tour leaves Piqua at 8 a. m., and may be joined at that point. On July 30, the first stop, 8:45 a. m., is at the farm of Lester Coffman, Farmersville, 4 miles south of Johnsville on Ohio route 11 west of Dayton. The first stop on July 31, 9:30 a. m., will be at the farm of George Lang, New Richmond, 4 miles north of U. S. route 52 at New Richmond.

TABER TO ADDRESS FARMERS JULY 20

L. J. Taber, master of the national grange, will address thousands of Ohio farmers at 7:40 p. m., July 20, when he talks on organization and progress from the state-owned broadcasting station WEAO as a part of the regular farm night program presented by staff members of the college of agriculture every Monday night, 7:30 to 9 p. m.

Among the other talks of interest to farmers scheduled for Monday night, July 20, are those dealing with the Ohio poultry tour, clipping new clover seeding some interests of farm boys, preparing fruit for market, and the farm fire menace. Supported by the state, the farm night radio programs are purely educational in nature and are free of all commercial advertising.

The grade crossing is acquiring a very degraded reputation.

MINISTERS ATTACK SUNDAY MOVIE BILL

COLUMBUS, O.—With the bill legalizing Sunday movies scheduled to become effective August 3, ministerial associations in several Ohio cities are at work attempting to force the enactment of city ordinances banning Sunday theatricals.

In nearly every city, theater owners are learning that their battle for the right to operate on Sunday did not end with the passing of the Ackerman bill, and the affixing of Governor George White's signature.

At East Liverpool, 1500 signatures have been obtained for a petitions calling for a vote at the Nov. 3 election on an initiated ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows.

Only 650 signatures, representing 10 per cent of the voters, are required. The petitions were circulated in East Liverpool churches.

Ministers at Martins Ferry, where Sunday shows have long been banned, declare they do not oppose a referendum on the proposition of allowing Sunday shows, but demand that the burden for such a vote fall on the advocates of Sunday theatricals.

An ordinance amending the Martins Ferry anti-Sunday movie law, making it conform to the new state law, has been proposed to the Martins Ferry council, but so far the council has not decided what to do. Ministers have asked that, if it be passed, it be declared effective only if it is approved by a vote of the people.

Another city facing a fight on the question is Steubenville. Cities along the Ohio River are particularly anxious to take advantage of the new state law, because, they say, much money that goes to West Virginia movie operators might be kept in Ohio.

Several college towns, including Delaware, Alliance and Wooster see controversies threatening. Delaware residents made a strong fight to obtain passage of the bill when it was before the state legislature, complaining that their city was almost vacated on Sunday by persons coming to Columbus theaters.

Under provisions of the new law, Sunday afternoon movies are declared legal unless local governments pass legislation banning such shows.

The bill places Sunday movies in the same status as Sunday baseball.

TAKE CENSUS OF WAR VETS NOT AT WORK

Complete Description of Plan to Go On Air at 5 p. m. Monday

A number of Pickaway-co Disabled Veterans of the World War are expected to participate in the first unemployment census of World War Veterans since the Armistice, to be made by the national organization in cooperation with the Veterans' Administration and Department of Labor. Plans for the census call for a subsequant mobilization of the nation's employment agencies to place those veterans found without work.

A complete description of the plan will be given in a special broadcast over the Columbia network, Monday at 5 p. m., with General Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans Affairs, J. R Alpine, special assistant to the Secretary of Labor and also supervising director of the U. S. Employment Service, and E. C. Babcock, assistant secretary of the U. S. Civil Service Commission and National Commander of the Disabled American Veterans. Babcock conceived the idea of bringing about the gigantic merger of agencies to give employment to veterans. The plan calls for the mobilization of all federal, state, county, city and civic employment agencies, and it is expected to guarantee coordination of agencies in finding employment for disabled veterans, with this class being given priority over all other classes of citizens who are in need of work.

The initial move will put through within a short time by questionnaries going directly and individually to every veteran on the compensation rolls of the Veterans' Administration. While these questionnaries will be sent out through the channels of the Veterans' Administration, the replies will be directed to the Department of Labor at Washington. These replies having been received they will then be sent to the employment director in the state in which the veteran resides. The employment director will then obtain more definite information concerning the veteran, by personal interview if possible, and having estimated the veteran's qualifications, every agency within that state will be turned loose to find him a job.

Champs Must Shop

Georgia Coleman (above), pretty national diving champion and holder of almost every diving title one can think of, may be all of that, but she's a girl anxious to do some shopping in New York in this picture. Georgia appeared thus when she arrived in the East from Seattle, Wash., weighed down with considerable evidence of shopping, even before she starts her tour of New York shops. She defends her title soon.

'YANKEE SOLDIER' CAUSING DISMAY

CLEVELAND, O.—With utter disregard for immigration laws and flaunting the disciples of birth control, the invading army of the ephmeredae clan, 100,000,000 and then some strong, is engaged in its annual summer war with the bright lights at Lake Erie points.

These mosquito-like creatures, which cause endless worry to shopkeepers and residents when they tire of flying and sit and die on window panes, are rading the lake communities in swarming hordes, eager for the fling that lasts but one single night.

Known to science as ephmeredae the layman has tacked at least three nicknames onto these unusual insects—May Fly and Canadian or Yankee Soldier—the latter appellation depending on which side of the great lakes they live The sophisticated name, pronounced E-fe-mer-e-di, with the accent on the 'mer' is derived from Ephemereds, Greek mythological creatures which lived only one day.

Very delicate creatures, the Ephemeredae in maturity are greatly similar to a mosquito except they are several times larger. They have four wings, two long ones in front and a pair of very small ones just behind. Three long antennae protrude nearly two inches from the rear of a long, soft abdomen.

A small mouthless head with two pin-point eyes can be seen at the other end of the abdomen. In maturity the Ephmeredae do not eat, partly accounting for their short lives. Their mouths become completely atrophied during numerous moltings and in earlier stages of their lives.

They cannot carry germs and are otherwise completely harmless. Probably the only way in which they constitute a real nuisance is that they squash easily when they strike a hard object and in this way litter up any spot they happen to haunt.

Although their one object in life is to reproduce, a great majority of the Ephemeredae never fulfil that object. The reason is principally because they, like humans, have a strong desire to explore the great white way.

Upon gaining his maturity, a night the 'May Fly' sets out on his nitial flight. Frequently aided by a seductive wind great swarms of these insects just grown up are swept in from the lakes to some lake city where they convent around each bright light until all have dashed themselves to death in their frenzy.

On Our Way

THE most striking feature of long-distance airplane flights is the greater degree of caution exercised and, in most instances, a certain contributory purpose to the progress of useful aviation It would be too much to say that the phase of heroic recklessness is done with, but its examples are becoming less frequent, and in doing so nothing detracts from that noble daring which needs must pioneer in every new field, nor from that continuing boldness which carried on a still perilous task; in no field of human endeavor has the spirit of sacrifice been more spectacular and more brave than in aviation.

The fact remains that the Atlantic has been crossed several times. There is now an air of relative certainty attaching to such flights, and diminished anxiety in the public mind. Mechanical features have been developed, construction improved in response to needs. Vital information is more readily obtained and more successfully distributed. Remote places are more alert and resourceful in furthering such adventures or in providing aids. Pilots have more experience, not only the fruit of their own exploits but the lesson plucked by others out of the wilful skies. More is known of the vagaries of Atlantic weather, and the treacheries of it can be matched more probably by human forethought and patience.

Almost it seems that so far from being surprised when an airplane reaches its distant goal, we would be surprised if it didn't.

It is an interesting gift to the people of this age, whose memory can span the first important flights and the contemporary ago of skilful, testing experiments and who, if they live only a reasonable number of added years, may witness the consistent fulfilment of man's proudest achievement.

Eyeing New Tax Sources

SECRETARY Mellon is fighting for a more balanced system of federal revenue, a system that can better stand the shocks of a business depression or stock market crash and prevent the recurrence of this year's staggering treasury deficit.

The government at a time of industrial depression finds the source from which it derives the major part of its revenues much less stable and reliable than the sources from which it derives the lesser contribution. The present situation is abnormal, but it sustains the case for a system less dependent on the flutuations of industry.

Federal revenue for the fiscal year that just ended was $612.000.000 below that for the preceding fiscal year. The drop was greatest in individual income tax receipts, amounting to 27.3 per cent, and it was least in miscellaneous taxes, including tobacco and other excise taxes and customs duties, which fell off only 9.8 per cent. Revenue from corporation income was 18 per cent lower.

The treasury department is asking, in the face of these facts, whether more stable income would not be maintained were the government to depend less on income taxes and more on levies against commodities which the people consume in equal quantities at all times.

There is another argument that can be advanced in behalf of the plan Income and corporation taxes are unpopular because they are direct. Excise taxes and customs duties are popular because they are indirect and, therefore, forgotten And no matter from whom they are collected the consumers pay them in the end

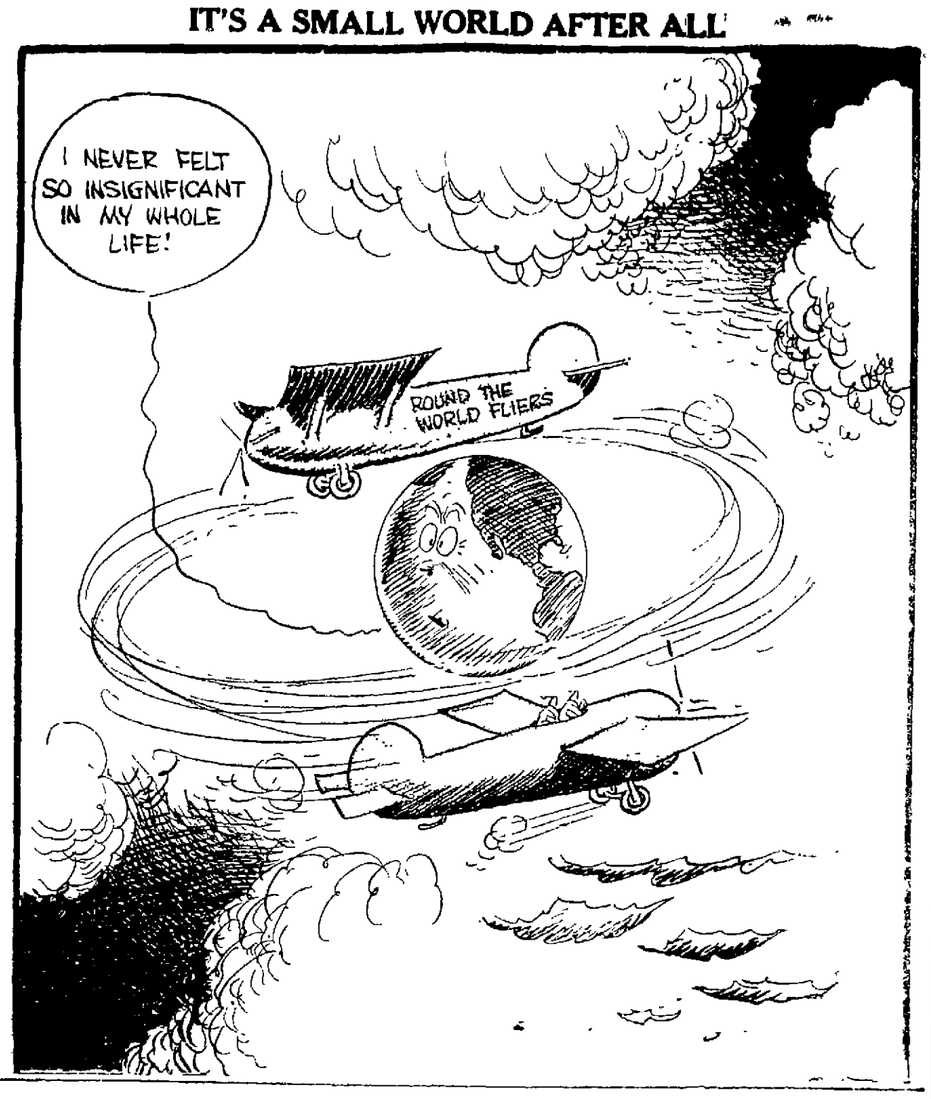
IT'S A SMALL WORLD AFTER ALL



"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Orphaned by the death of her parents, beautiful and vivacious Mary Lou Thurston lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson, and takes care of Billy, their son. When Sanderson and his wife go abroad, leaving Billy with his grandmother, Mary Lou is left on her own. Larry Mitchell, young newspaper reporter and Mary Lou's pal, finds an ad in which a companion for a semi-invalid is sought. Mary Lou arrives at the stately Lorrimer mansion in Connecticut and is interviewed by the charming Mrs. Lorrimer. Mary Lou is bitterly disappointed to learn the semi-invalid is Mrs. Lorrimer's son, Travers, and the ad should have read "male" companion. Travers, shell-shocked in the war, and suffering from another sad experience, is listless, almost a recluse. As Mary Lou prepares to leave, Travers enters the room. He rushes to Mary Lou, takes her in his arms and calls her 'Delight" and "wife." Overwrought when she does not respond, he faints. Mrs. Lorrimer persuades Mary Lou to remain until the doctor arrives.

CHAPTER X.

WITH no further protest Mary Lou followed Peter from the room and went with him to the broad curving stairs.

Above the rooms opened on a gallery. The room into which Peter showed her, silently, was evidently Mrs. Lorrimer's private sitting-room, a charming, restful, sunny place, done beautifully in soft grays and clear greens with odd little touches of mauve and rose.

Mary Lou stood hesitant. She had never been so bewildered in all her 20 years. She said aloud, "Oh, what on earth shall I do?"

She was talking, perhaps, to herself. But Peter answered, deferential but briskly:

"If I were you, Miss, I'd sit down and—rest. You've had a shock," said the elderly man, quietly... "Mr. Travers—" He stopped and said no more, realizing that it was not part of his duty to discuss family matters with an outsider. He indicated the chaise-longue, the comfortable, deep chair, the many books, scattered on small tables and housed in built-in book-cases, the silver and enamel boxes of cigarettes. "If you'd take a chair, Miss," he suggested, "and make yourself at home?"

A Real Home.

Mary Lou reached up mechanically to take off her hat. Her head ached. But, then, she remembered that the hat lay on the floor where Lorrimer had cast it. She remembered that her coat and her pocketbook were downstairs. There was nothing to do but wait.

Peter went out and closed the door softly behind him. Mary Lou stared around her, unseeingly at first, and then gradually absorbing the really exquisite surroundings in which she so amazingly found herself.

She rose and, at first timidly, wandered about the big, rather oddly shaped room.

"I suppose this is what they call a boudoir," thought Mary Lou to herself with a half giggle, her courage, color and spirits beginning to return. "I've read about 'em and I can't pronounce 'em," she informed herself further, "but it's the first time I've ever come into contact with one of 'em."

There was nothing key or overcrowded, perfumed or bedecked about the room. It was simply a comfortable, lived-in sort of place, restrained and beautiful in coloring and appointments and filled with books, old and new, shabby and fresh.

Over by the corner of the bookcase, near the great double windows which looked out over the lawns and had in addition a silver glimpse of the Sound as well, Mary Lou lifted her eager, bookloving eyes from the rows upon rows of volumes and looked straight into equally eager, laughing eyes which looked down on her from a photograph framed in heavy, dull silver which stood where two bookcases meeting made an angle. It was the only photograph in the room.

For a moment Mary Lou stared, conscious of a slight shock. She knew the eyes, she thought, and the face . . . a lean, laughing face under the jaunty cap of the Royal Flying Corps. She knew, too, she thought, the tall, broad-shouldered uniformed figure, sitting very negligently on some excellent photographer's bench. Knew and yet did not know. And it was a full minute before it dawned on her that here was Travers Lorrimer, the man downstairs, the man who had exposed her to so frightening and inexplicable a scene, a scene of which she was trying hard not to think, lest she become terrified again.

Whys and Wherefores.

Lorrimer as he had been, Lorrimer very young, Lorrimer in early 1915, so many years ago, Lorrimer just turned 18 years of age, a laughing, delightful boy.

Her heart hurt her with pity. Half unconsciously she reached up and carefully lifted down the big heavy frame and went to the couch and sat down, still holding the picture, looking at it intently, wondering about it.

For whom had he mistaken her? Someone named Delight? Odd name, pretty name, she liked it. Someone he had not seen in a long time. Someone he loved . . . and called . . . his wife. Who was she and where was she? Was she dead, were they trying to keep it from him, or had she deserted him? Where had he married her . . . ? and when . . . ?

She came back again and again to that incredible and breathless moment when she had been caught up in arms grown suddenly strong, when she had been held close to this stranger's heart, when she had felt his lips on her eyelids, on her face. . .

What was the explanation? Oh, she would have to wait and hear: she owed that to Mrs. Lorrimer! But she wanted to get away somehow. She was still afraid, still very unsure of herself.

She put the picture down beside her and reached out for a magazine to distract her from her thoughts and ceaseless speculations. But, turning the pages, her eyes, fastened on picture or text, saw nothing, read nothing; the printed words made absolutely no sense. What would she do now? After she got back to Oakdale? How far away Oakdale seemed! Was it only this morning that she had left there, eaten her hasty breakfast with Billy bouncing in his chair, with Adelaide complaining from her couch and Gram bustling in from the kitchen? Only this morning, too, that she had seen Larry and he had teased her about her adventuring into the land of Those Seeking Employment? "Remember you are a lineal descendant of Queen Cleopatra," he had said. Well, she hadn't been able to remember she was anyone's descendant—today's events had stripped her of family, relatives, friends and even actual existence, so forlorn and strange, so bewildered she had been!

Well, soon Mrs. Lorrimer would come and explain what there was to explain. .not that it mattered, she thought, poor fellow, poor unhappy, unfortunate boy—but she'd wait and listen and then perhaps Mrs. Lorrimer would send her to the station and she would go on back to New York and Oakdale. And tomorrow she would come into town again and present the letter written by Mrs. Lorrimer for her and perhaps something would come of it, perhaps she would get a position.

There was a step in the hall. She stiffened, listening eagerly. No, not Mrs. Lorrimer's step and Mrs. Lorrimer would not have knocked.

"Come in—"

It was Peter, with a tray, the smart maidservant following him.

"Luncheon, Miss Thurston," said Peter gravely. "Mrs. Lorrimer is still with Doctor Mathews and begs you to excuse her. She said she hoped you would find everything to your liking and she will join you here presently."

While Peter arranged the luncheon on a little dropleaf table which he drew out from the wall, the maid said, pleasantly:

"I'm Hilda, Miss. Mrs. Lorrimer asked me to show you into her room in case you wished to brush your hair and wash . . . ?"

Feeling suddenly as if she had entered a fascinating fairy tale, with its One-Eye, Two-Eye, Three-Eye, miraculously appearing luncheon tables and all, Mary Lou followed Hilda's becoming maroon uniform into the loveliest bedroom she had ever seen in her life and through that into a great bathroom, painted and decorated in mauves and greens. There was a huge dressing table there with many mirrors and rows of crystal bottles with jade stoppers and squat crystal jars filled with cold creams and cosmetics which looked quite good enough to eat.

Hilda produced heavy linen towels and gayly colored wash cloths, a powder jar and tufts of ribbontied cotton and a brand new brush and comb in a little case and, after inquiring whether there was anything more she could do, withdrew.

Mary Lou washed her hands and face, combed her hair and powdered her pert little nose in a sort of dazed and lazy dream. Even the towels were too good to be true. Her fascinated eyes lingered long on the shining shower with its heavy glass door. She'd never seen one like it and was by now so "surrendered to circumstances" that if Hilda had suddenly invited her to bathe in the pale green sunken tub or to stand under the needle-spray of the shower, she would probably have done so, without question.

Fairyland.

She walked about and looked at the interesting walls, cool green and splashed with lavender in strange and unconventional flower designs. She had just about decided that it looked like a garden of iris when Hilda knocked at the door and announced luncheon. So Mary Lou went obediently out of the beautiful bathroom into the more beautiful bedroom and through to the sitting-room, suddenly conscious that she was very hungry indeed.

Hilda had vanished. Peter hovered for a moment to see that the tea was strong enough and everything arranged for her comfort and then he, too, followed Hilda's example and left Mary Lou to gaze upon her tray with extreme pleasure and appetite.

A round of orange-bright melon, a chee of lime, a cup of steaming hot clear chicken broth, lots of brown bread, which she loved, cut thin, the way she liked it; Melba toast as well, fresh buttered; a lamb chop, a baked potato, taken out of its shell and whipped with cream and put back again, and new green peas in milk; tea, with lemon and with cream; and a funny little fruit dessert, all fluff and sweetness such as girls love.

Simple Tumor Often Causes Undue Alarm

A "Sebaceous Cyst," a Swelling Usually Making Its Appearance in the Scalp, Is No Cause for Worry Unless Neglected, Says Authority, Urging Its Removal

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

"TUMOR" is the word commonly used in describing a swelling of the tissues. As a matter of fact, it is derived from the Greek word meaning swelling.

Frequently the name tumor is thought to refer to the swelling due to cancer. It is for this reason that many a person becomes unduly alarmed when told by the physician that he has a tumor.

One of the most simple types of tumor that I can tell you about is known as a "sebaceous cyst." These cysts, or tumors, occur either singly or in groups. They vary in size from a tiny swelling to a sac two inches or more in diameter.

Sebaceous cysts are most commonly seen in the scalp. They also occur behind the ear, in the eyebrow or wherever hair is found. Though found in young adults, they are most common in middle age.

The condition is caused by a blocking up of the duct of a sebaceous gland, a gland of the skin. The material manufactured by the gland gradually accumulates within its envelope and produces the tumor.

The tumor grows rather rapidly, but sometimes has long dormant periods when it does not seem to grow at all. One of these cysts, or tumors, may attain a very large size if left alone.

It may become inflamed and rupture, discharging the contents of the sac. This gives but temporary relief, because the sac will fill again in a short time.

There is only one thing to do for this condition. The cyst and its contents must be removed. In addition to removing the mass, this procedure guards again its recurrence.

The operation is very simple and can be done in the doctor's office. There is no pain attached to it, as it is usually performed under local anaesthesia.

I advise having such tumors removed. A cleanly done little operation amounts to nothing. If the swelling is left alone and the sac permitted to rupture, in addition to its becoming inflamed, it may become infected. Once infected, it may cause great misery and discomfort.

Hint Murder in Fire Death

Charred almost beyond recognition, the body of Mrs. Marion Day Berrien, former Follies beauty, was discovered in the fire-swept ruins of her home in one of the most exclusive sections of Forest Hills, L. I., smart New York residential suburb. With the finding of the body, authorities were presented with a mystery that may equal the Snyder-Gray case. Although the beauty, 30 years old and widow of a naval officer, might have met her death accidentally, murder was hinted in the preliminary investigation The partly destroyed home of Mrs. Berrien is shown with the ex-stage star in insert.

SURVIVORS MAY RECEIVE FLAGS

Under a new ruling now effective, families who have a deceased war veteran whose casket they would drape with the national colors, should apply to the postoffice for such a flag. They are required to bring with them indentifications of the person and show an honorable discharge from the military service of the country.

An expert says every car owner should learn how each part of his car functions. He should at least learn how the steering wheel functions.

Theaters

AT THE CLIFTONA

Ever hear of an actress so good that she spoiled scenes?

That, paradoxically enough, applies to Claudette Colbert, who, while making a dramatic scene for "Honor Among Lovers," Paramount talking picture which is at the Cliftona Theater, cried so perfectly so frequently and so abundantly that the movie's perfect substitute for mascara ran from starry eyes right down ivory white cheeks in black streaks.

AT THE GRAND

Bobby Jones, besides being the world's champion golfer and the star of Vitaphone's twelve shorts on "How I Play Golf," one of which is now being shown at the Grand Theater, is an author He has written his autobiography, 'Down the Fairway" which has been a big seller. He is probably the only man who had accomplished enough by the time he was twenty-five to make the story of his life of general interest. His years as a golf champion made such a book obligatory.

Did you ever stop to think

by EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Okla.

That in some cities the majority of the people seem little concerned about working out plans for the betterment of the home city.

These same people seem much concerned, however, in working out plans that will soak better business in the eye.

Cities that think they can fool everybody usually wake up to find themselves well fooled.

Cities that continually sing a hymn of hate against the world never get far in the March of Progress.

Cities that have been conducted on an unsound basis must get on a sound basis if they expect to move ahead.

No city can get far as long as a large portion of its citizens spend time thinking in the past and nursing grouches.

Cities that continue to dwell in the past cannot expect much in the future.

Only citizens that place the welfare of the home city along with their own make good citizens.

Every patriotic citizen should raise and speak loudly in praise of the home city.

Everybody should be loyal to their home city and support it in every way possible.

The tiny lice of red, green, or black color, that are oftentimes found on stems of flowers, exist by sucking the juice from the plants. The lice may be eradicated by spraying with pyrethrum extract or nicotine sulfate, or by dusting with nicotine dust. Several weekly applications are necessary to rid the garden of the pest.

CO-OP OFFICIALS TO MEET TO STUDY ECONOMIC HELP

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—Important steps to help the Ohio farmer make his dream equality come true will be taken here July 16, when farm cooperative officials from all parts of the state assemble to consider forming a state cooperative council.

By combining their strength and directing it by one leader—the state cooperative council—farm spokesmen declare their wishes would get far more attention than they now receive, and that their opinions in general would carry more weight

Although there are numerous cooperatives in operation now, their work is not as effective as it could be, the leaders lament because no central authority guides their activities.

While they admit the plea is familiar and that it has a ring known to all who are almost unceasingly being begged to cooperate, the leaders see in a central cooperative council the cure for their ills

Once organized, such a council could rightfully claim to speak for 75 per cent of Ohio's 220,000 farmers whose buying power mount to a tremendous total.

Back of the movement are two leaders in the cooperation movement, the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation and the Ohio State Grange as well as the Central Dairy Products council and the Ohio Livestock Cooperative association. They called the meeting

Eager to assist, it is said, are the Ohio State Vegetable Growers association, the Ohio Wool Growers Cooperative association, the Ohio Farmers' Grain and Supply association, and the Ohio Equity Union.

Although leaders have not said so, observers here believe the movement is an outcome of the recent legislative session, when, it was understood, the rural group was not fully satisfied with the action of the assembly. Politicians would submit to farm requests with less difficulty if a frank statement of farmers' strength could accompany each demand, it was pointed out.

Legislation is admittedly one of the common interests of the various cooperatives, spokesmen say. Education is another. If combined, they could better safeguard their mutual problems, they say.

The meeting will be held at Ohio State university.

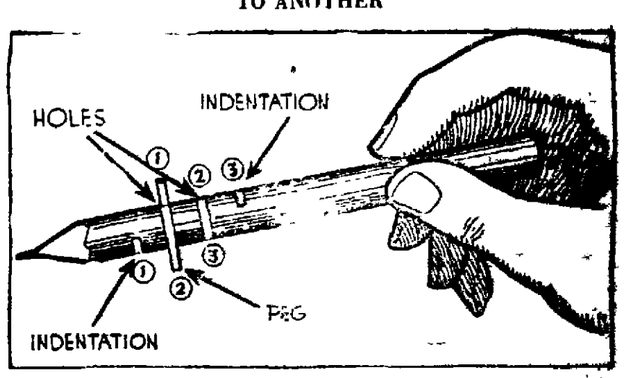
TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst

HOW TO MAKE A PEG JUMP FROM ONE HOLE TO ANOTHER



The secret of this trick lies in the way the holes are placed in the pencil. Two holes are drilled through the pencil, and two deep indentations resembling holes are made, one on each side, making what appears to be three holes in the pencil. Each of the indentations is placed at opposite ends of the two holes as shown in the above drawing. Make a small peg, place it in hole number two twist the pencil so the [illegible] side comes on top and the peg will have jumped to hole number three. The same can be done with holes number two and three. The [illegible] is more effective if the pencil is twisted quickly.

rdinals Face Brooklyn Team

BY COPELAND C. BURG

NEW YORK, July 14—Whether the St. Louis Cardinals are going to win the National league pennant or just give the Brooklyn Robins and New York Giants a run for it probably will be decided this week.

The Redbirds now four and one-half games ahead of this-and-that Giants and six in front of the invading Robins, open a four game series against Brooklyn today. The Giants play the wrecked Chicago cubs and if Brooklyn is half as good a club as people in Brooklyn think, the New Yorkers will have a sweet chance to stab Frisch for the league lead, the big question being whether the Robins can subdue the Cards.

The Cubs didn't show anything to grief in the tilt with the Cards yesterday, losing 12 to 5. Malone and Sweetland got knocked out of the box and Hornsby and Wilson, the late home run king, could not get a hit off Burleigh Grimes. In their present weakened condition the Bruins should fold up like an accordeon before the New Yorkers, indicating they would beat the Robins at their own game, the Redbirds hit the ball in a gigantic offensive, with High getting four, Watkins four and Flowers three of St. Louis's 19 swats garnered off the Cub mounders.

Brooklyn's hope is that the rakish over the coals Manager Hornsby must be given his players will inspire them to vanquish the Giants and that the clouting banquet of the Cards yesterday will satisfy their appetites during the Bobin series.

Philadelphia split a twin afternoon with the Senators, maintaining a six game lead in the American race. A triple by Foxx, a homer by Williams with the bags choked, three walks off Hadley and a wild pitch netted the A's seven runs in the eight inning and they rolled it away, 12 to 7. Cochrane, Simmons, Foxx, and Bishop also homered during the rout. Crowder out pitched Walberg in the bats of Kuhel and Harris.

With the Maner brothers on the bench, Paul because the Phils used Jim Elliott, left-handed hurler, and Lloyd because of ankle injuries, Philadelphia won 1 to 0 over the Pirates. Klein whacked a single and Hurst doubled in the ninth for sole tally. Krèmer and Elliott each allowed five safeties.

Other clubs were unemployed.

GROCERS EDGE OILS 9 AGAIN

Fast Double Play Puts End to Contest in Ninth with Runs on Base

A double play with the tying and winning runs on base and only one out ended a threat of the Circleville Oils in the ninth inning of Monday evening's game and the Independent Grocers again exercised their masterfulness over Glen Nickerson's team. The score was 3-2 and the game one of the hottest contested of the year.

Hits were evenly divided with the teams entering the eight inning deadlocked; 2-2. Don White got on base on a bad throw and went the rest of the way round to score the winning run when his coharts came through. In the Oil half of the eight two were on with only one out but a pop and an outfield fly ending festivities.

In the ninth runners reached second and first with one out when Dick Robinson cracked one at George Brungs at third base. He stepped on the sack and threw to second ending the game.

Eddie Watson and Carl Purcell tangled in this hot mound duel neither having much of an edge. Watson pitched one of his best games of the year, while Purcell was just as good.

The victory put the Grocers in first place, the Oils in last.

This evening the Red Men and Coca Colas play.

CANZONERI WINS

LOS ANGELES, July 14—Tony Canzoneri still wore his junior welterweight crown perked jauntily alongside his lightweight fedora, today the challenge of Cecil Payne, Louisville, Ky., having been rested successfully in a ten-round bout.

Canzoneri weighed in at 132½ pounds and Payne was at 136, safely over the lightweight limit, so failed to leave Canzoneri that title no matter what happened.

LARY TO WED

NEW YORK, July 14— Lyn Lary, shortstop of the New York Yankees, and Mary Lawlor, musical comedy actress, are to be married today.

Their romance began three years ago when Lary was a star in the Pacific Coast Legion. Miss Lawlor, who was Richard Dix's leading women, was making pictures at the time.

"BAT" TO MEET CINCINNATIAN

Herman Katz Putting Championship Match at Redland Field, July 23.

CINCINNATI, O., July 14—Featherweight Champion "Bat" Battalino will be facing "killer" opposition for the third time in recent months when he dances out of his corner against Freddy Miller, Cincinnati glove-throwing wizard, in a title bout at Redland field on July 23.

Although his record doesn't show it, Miller, according to his Cincinnati admirers, is fully as difficult an opponent as the last two men the champion whipped—Kid Chocolate and Fidel La Barba.

Miller, according to Cincinnati, has acquired the Dempsey killer instinct in recent fights. His latest victory was scored over Eddie Shea, Chicago feather, in a go at Redland field. Out-of-town officials gave the Cincinnatian a unanimous verdict.

Besides holding victories over Johnny Farr, Tommy Paul, Roger Bernard and Cecil Payne, Miller also holds a draw decision with Bushy Graham, the record of his up-and-down career shows.

Not having had a championship fight since 1885, when John L. Sullivan ruled the heavies, Cincinnati is all agog at the thought of the approaching clash.

Chicago and New York and Cincinnati staged championship fights differently 45 years ago, according to a handful of fans who recall Sullivan's bout with Dominick McCaffrey at Chester Park on a sultry August afternoon.

Sullivan, in a liberal mood, had offered the challenger the championship if he could stay in the ring with him for six rounds. At the end of six rounds, McCaffrey was still in the ring but not in very good condition.

Surprised at the peculiarities of the contract, Referee Billy Tate of Toledo delayed returning a verdict until he had made an investigation. For a week the impatient fight world waited for him to complete his inquiry.

Then, suddenly, Tate gave his answer. The contract did specify that the title was to go to McCaffrey if he stayed six rounds with the champ. And McCaffrey had stayed six rounds. Nevertheless, Tate ruled, the challanger had been so busy staying in the ring he had done little else, and so the crown remained on the same head.

ALLIS TO PLAY THE HAIG TODAY

TORONTO, ONT., July 14 — Percy Allis, the sturdy Englishman who plays from the Wannsee club of Berlin, will tee off here this morning with Walter Hagen, former American and British open champion in their thirty-six hole play-off for the open golf championship of Canada.

The Berlin "pro" and the Haig tied for the title last Saturday, when they both turned in cards of 282 for the regular seventy-two holes of the championship.

Today's match is expected to prove just as close and keen a contest as was their duel last week. Both cut par for Mississauga six strokes in turning in their record totals.

WOLGAST RETAINS FLYWEIGHT CROWN

NEW YORK, July 14— Midget Wolgast, recognized by the New York and Pennsylvania commissions as the world's flyweight champion, carried too many guns for Rube Bradley, of Holyoke, Mass., last night at the Coney Island stadium, and successfully defended his laurels in 15 rounds.

Despite the fact the title-holder carried every session but the eight, he was hard pressed to win the verdict. The little negro scrapper had him on the go at all times.

Wolgast was ahead in every heat but the eight, the round that the challenger put on his big showing. In the session Bradley clipped the champ a hard right on the face that sent Wolgast back.

The Holyoke boy rushed in to given the champ the "work," but the Philly boxer manouvered his way out safely.

It was the first title affair in the Coney Stadium since the evening Jim Jefferies beat Jim Corbett for the heavy crown.

Wolgast tipped the beam at 111 1-2 to Rube's 110 1-2.

Your Standard of Living

For all we know, some Mongolian landowner, living miserably in a smoky felt tent, may be the richest man in the world . . . for standards of living are not based merely on wealth. They are based rather on the way people use wealth. The reason why American standards are considered highest in the world is because the great majority of Americans have at their command all the things necessary to a civilized and cultured mode of living.

Any housewife in America, even of most moderate means, can draw upon the resources of all the world for her own private use!

You may study and enjoy outright at very small expense, music . . . drama . . . art in all its forms. You may review the smartest styles each day as they appear in the pages of newspapers. You may select household furnishings, modern conveniences, heat-units, refrigeration, food in luxurious and endless variety, cosmetics, dress-goods, automobiles, anything in fact that is commonly looked upon as part of the American scene . . . you may select these things leisurely and conveniently by merely studying the advertisements as they appear each day!

SUGGEST THINNING FOR BETTER FRUIT

By thinning fall and winter apples, orchardists can improve the size, color, and grade of their fruit, according to specialists in horticulture at the Ohio State University, who declare that the practice does not reduce total yield and increases the amount of number 1 apples.

Culls which are removed now are definitely disposed of, while good fruits that will grade out continue to grow. Because of this they believe that thinning should be looked upon as a harvesting and not a growing cost.

Other advantages of thinning, declare the specialists, are that tree breakage is reduced, tree vigor is improved, better control of the second brood codling moth can be secured, all fruit handling costs are lowered, and the apples ripen more uniformly and require fewer pickings than do unthinned trees.

It is best, they believe, to remove all blemished, small, and mis-shappen apples and to leave only the best single apples in the clusters. For most varieties an 8-inch spacing is the most satisfactory.

GARDEN PRODUCE RICH IN VITAMINS

Vegetables are also important in den are not a luxury but a good investment in health, declare nutrition specialists in the department of home economics at the Ohio State University, who believe that when they are added to the diet they will often renew energy, clear up a muddy skin, and help build up body resistance.

Vegetables are also important in preventing constipation, the specialists says, and supply minerals and vitamins. Leafy vegetables are especially valuable for their iron and vitamin A content. They should be eaten at least every other day and may be eaten with benefit every day.

Coarse vegetables, such as carrots, beets, turnips, green beans, and corn, contain vitamins in relatively large amounts, a wide variety of necessary minerals and considerable bulk, which helps in preventing constipation. They also contain amounts of musclebuilding and energy giving materials.

Starchy vegetables, which include potatoes, dry beans, macaroni, spaghetti, and polished rice are rich in energy material carried also by bread, cereal products, sugars, and fats. They contain vitamins and minerals in small amounts, except potatoes which are fairly rich in them.

News of Homes and Home Folks

Published by STEVENSON'S

VOL. 3. NO. 27 — Tuesday, July 14, 1931

Last week, you'll recall, we printed a letter that we had received from Mr. Weaver, distributor of Pyrofax gas service in the Peebles district. Mr. Weaver mentioned that a Mr. Tener, of Sinking Springs, used a tank of gas from November 22, 1930, to April 10, 1931, or 139 days at a cost of 60.4c per week. Well, we wrote to Mr. Tener, asking him to give us a letter regarding his experience with Pyrofax. With our letter, we mailed him a small pamphlet which showed a range that we think is just about the best coal fire-box with two cooking lids over it, and four burners for gas that we have seen for country homes. It's a range that has a coal fire-box with two cooking lids over it and four burners for gas and a gas oven. The coal fire-box is used for heating the kitchen, heating water in a range boiler, and may be used for cooking meals when the fire is being used for heating the kitchen and water. That's why we're so crazy about this particular range—it's so useful.

Well, to get back to Mr. Tener's reply, here is what he wrote on the bottom of our letter:

> "This is all true ,except that the time was 159 days, instead of 139 days. We think this is the cheapest and best stove there is."

His reply was short, but sweet. Since he says that the tank of gas lasted 159 days, at $12 per tank the cost of operation was but .075 per day, or only .525 per week. Now then, you folks that say that it'll cost more than we say it will what have you say about that? It may be that Pyrofax is a little more costly than gasoline or kerosene, but how about the convenience? Isn't it worth a little to get out of pumping up the air-pressure, filling the tank every day or two, cleaning the generator every few weeks, waiting for the generator to heat up, and having odors in the house? You have none of this with PYROFAX. Right now, while it's hot, is the time to have an outfit installed. Give us a ring and we'll run out and explain it more fully to you.

Camp Meetin' time is with us again. So are picnics. Why not take one of those folding camp stools with you? They'll fold up into a small space and they'll come in mighty handy when you wish to rest your "dogs." They cost but a trifle.

We're indebted to P. W. (Pete) Price for a window name plate that "Pete" made for us. He took a cherry board and carved our name in it, filling the carving with a white filler. We'll be glad to show it to you, if you'll remind us of it.

"It pays to advertise" is as old as the hills. Sometimes, we'll admit, we ponder if it is true, and then something happens to make us believe that it does pay. We've been telling you folks that we had 9x12 rug pads as low as $4.75. We've sold quite a few this year, many of the customers telling us that they read about the pads in RTT. Last Friday we delivered two more to a lady up near Ashville. She, evidently, has read about them and so called us on long distance and ordered two sent to her. She'll find that her rugs will not only "walk" better, but they'll wear better. Put one of these pads under your rug and note the difference.

We've told you before about the hobby of P. W. (Pete) Price "Pete" would rather make something nice out of wood than eat a good meal. It's his hobby, and does he ride it? Just step down to our store and see some of his work in our window. We can't tell you about it here, but let's mention that butterfly that is made of ten distinct varieties of wood—some from China, some from Ceylon, some from Manilla, and some from the good old U. S. A. Come on, now, you old experts on woods, and see if you can name the various woods that "Pete" has used in his works of art. Drop into the store and see what a man can do with a couple of chisels and a turning lathe. You'll be surprised.

One day last week we tried to interest a user of an Estate Heatrola in our Blanket Club. 'Sno use trying it again for that lady told us that since she has been using one of our Heatrolas that she has had no use for blankets on her beds, except light ones for covering. We might have known better than to have mentioned them to her. We've known that the Estate Heatrola heats the whole house — upstairs and down—just like a furnace. There is only one Heatrola—the ESTATE HEATROLA—and we are the only distributor in this county. Watch for the FREE COAL announcement.

In days of yore, if anybody missed a stage coach, he was contented to wait two or three days for the next one. Now he lets out a squawk if he misses one section of a revolving door.

It was three years ago last May 1st that we delivered an Alcazar gasoline pressure range to the home of Mr. and Mrs Russell Heffner. At that time, they lived near Stringtown. They have since moved to a farm north of Williamsport. Mrs Heffner was in the store Saturday night and was telling us how much she likes her range. Well, even if we do say it ourselves—it's some convenient method of cooking and baking. It is surpassed by only one other type of range—the Pyrofax GAS range.

It's not too late to order out one of our gliders. A family up in the north end of town had one delivered just a few days ago and we'll bet our bottom dollar that it's occupied most of the time, too. We have a real nice swing or glider for only $18.50.
